The State Pioneer Association will meet at Madison, on Wednesday, June 7, at two o'clock. This meeting will be addressed by several eminent persons of the pioneer period of the State.

Mr. Edward Stabler, of Sandy Springs, Maryland, claims to be the oldest postmaster, in point of service, in the United States. He was appointed to the office he now holds fifty years ago, by President Jackson. Financially, it is not a desirable office, the salary now being only $397.

Congressman Williams will please accept the thanks of the Gazette for a copy of "The Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies," recently published by order of Congress. It is in four volumes, and makes an invaluable contribution to the history of the great civil conflict.

It is said that Alexander Stephens will accept a nomination for Governor of Georgia only from the Democratic party. The Democrats seem to be much pleased at this, but the Independents can congratulate themselves in case Mr. Stephens is nominated that they compelled the Bourbons to take him up and so prevent the nomination of an objectionable candidate.

The Republicans of Indiana are taking decided ground at their county conventions in favor of the submission of the prohibitory amendment to the people. No endorsement of prohibition is given, but the demand is made that the people shall have the liberty to decide this question for themselves. The Democrats propose to refuse the people this right.

GARFIELD'S MURDERER.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The statement that Van Heis, of Newark, had been asked by the authorities here superintend the hanging of Charles J. Guiteau, and that $200 had been offered for his services, is positively denied by the jail official. It may be stated that no outsiders will be asked or expected to even assist, much less superintend the Guiteau's execution.

Guiteau is gradually losing that intense egotism and bravado which he has hitherto exhibited, and in the language of a prominent jail official, "Is now more like a rational human being than he has been since he entered the jail."

"I Don't Want That Stuff."

Is what a lady of Boston said to her husband when he brought home some medicine to cure her of sick headache and neuralgia which had made her miserable for fourteen years. At first attack there after it was administered to her with such good results that she continued its use until cured, and made so enthusiastic in its praise that she induced twenty-two of the best families in her circle to adopt it as their regular family medicine. That stuff is Hop Bitters.

DROWNED.

GENEVA LAKE, Wis., May 28.—A sad accident occurred here to-day by which Frank Stoner and Arthur Cole lost their lives by drowning. Both belonged at Chicago and were here in the employ of Barry & Sons, painting the Lester manufactory. They together with a company who was saved by clinging to the boat, attempted to go up the lake in a row boat which was capsized, with the above result. Stoner leaves a wife and four children. Cole was unmarried. The bodies were recovered.

RAILROAD WAR.

ROCKFORD, May 28.—Saturday, about 10:30 o'clock, 100 railroaders with twenty-five flat cars loaded with gravel, rails, and sleepers, drawn by two locomotives, put in an appearance in this city on the Kenosha Division of the Northwestern road. They tore up about 200 feet of the newly laid Chicago, Burlington and Quincy tracks on North Water streets, laid about 300 feet in a diagonal direction from their main tracks to the river, heading off the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy from going further north. W. H. Holcomb, of Rochelle, the receiver of the Rockford branch of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, was telegraphed, and it is quite likely that another railroad war has been started. Lively times are to be enjoyed a wonderful boom—a piece of good fortune which it well deserves.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the noted woman lawyer at Washington, never lacks in personal traits, and so on, which attract attention. It is written by John W. Forney, Jr., that "she rides down Pennsylvania avenue, every morning, on a tricycle. It is a courageous thing to do, but Mrs. Lockwood is always courageous. I confess I cannot see why this should be regarded as such an amusing performance as some of the correspondents profess to think it. It is cheaper than the horse car, it is quick travel, and it is good exercise. Why Mrs. Lockwood or any other woman should not use the tricycle, if she wants to, is all a matter of prejudice, and prejudice has not often sense except in a few days."

MACKEY-DIBBLE CASE.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The Republican conference to-night decided to call up the Mackey-Dibble case the first thing to-morrow, and then, as soon as a quorum of Republicans can be secured, to withdraw that and take up the amendments to the rules. This will insure a lively time in the House to-morrow. There are some Democrats, however, who will be very glad to get out of the scrape in this way. It clears them of falsehood to their Southern constituents by shifting the responsibility upon their opponents, and releases them from the odium of fac-tious opposition.

THE POND LAW.

COLUMBUS, O., May 28.—The Judges of the Supreme Court are busily engaged in preparing their decisions in the case submitted to them testing constitutionality of the Pond law taxing liquor traffic. The report will be made next Tuesday. From the best information at hand it is believed that the court will declare the law unconstitutional. There may be differences on some parts, but in the main the court will not doubt agree, and it is thought it will be unanimous in its decision.

CRUEL DESERTION.

NEW YORK, May 28.—A mild sensation was created in Newark to-day by the announcement that Mr. Conrad Kunkel, in the employ of a well-known brewer, had deserted his promised bride at the eleventh hour. He had given orders to a fashionable caterer to prepare for yesterday a magnificent supper for 150 persons, while his brother-in-law that was to be had issued numerous invitations to their friends to witness the ceremony. The friends in due course came to witness, but there was nothing to see. The bride-groom tarried and kept on tarrying to that extent that he did not come at all. Vengeance was vowed against him by the fair one's brother, and if she didn't get love she received at least plenty of sympathy. The cause of the trouble is said to be that the Kunkel people, being Roman Catholics, and the girl a Protestant, they forced him to break off the marriage and fly the city.

A SOCIAL SENSATION.

MILWAUKEE, May 28.—A genuine social sensation was caused in this city to-day by the announcement of the romantic marriage of Mr. Hugh Ryan, son of the late Chief Justice Ryan, with Mrs. Eads, a charming young widow. Mrs. Eads was to have been married on Monday last to a prominent businessman in La Crosse named Randolph. The latter arrived here on the day set and found that the lady had pledged herself to another. Her marriage to Mr. Ryan took place on the following day. The La Crosse man accepted the inevitable gracefully and joined with many others in extending congratulations to the happy couple. Mr. Ryan is Court Commissioner here and a lawyer of fine ability.

The Chivalrous "Comanche Bill."

An incident is related of Bill which happened in Wichita. Bill rode into the town dressed in a complete suit of buckskin and with a gang of honest rangers at his back. As he went along he saw a "counter-jumper," as he was pleased to call him, roughly catch a little girl about 18 years old by the shoulder and solicit her attention. The girl withdrew her arm angrily, and just then the scene fell under Bill's personal inspection.

"She was a poor girl," says Bill, "and plainly clad in an old dress, but I won't going to see her insulted by any durned counter-hopper under my mountain eyes. I just jumped down from my horse and I called for that fellow to stop. He didn't seem to want to, but I made him stop. I took up the little girl in my arms and sat her down on a box. I took off her shoes and said to the counter-jumper: 'Now, I want you to get down and lick the dust off the soles of that poor girl's feet whom you have insulted.' And I made him do it. He looked down in the muzzle of a 45-caliber Colt's for just about half a minute, and then he came to my milk like a little lamb. And I made him lick that girl's feet for a plump two hours, though a big crowd gathered around, but I had all my men with me and did not care whether they liked it or not."—Kansas City Times.

Oriental Proverbs.

The following are some of the infinite number of Oriental proverbs:

It is easy to mount a little donkey.

The nightingale was shut up in a golden cage, but still she cried, "My home, my home."

Two Captains in one ship will surely sink her.

The fox ends by getting into the furrier's shop.

Knife wounds heal, but not those produced by a word.

The heart is a crystal palace; once broken, it can never be mended.

With patience, sour grapes become sweetmeats and mulberry leaves turn to satin.

At sight of a glow-worm, the timid cry "Fire."

A fly is nothing, but it spoils the appetite.

The apple and the pomegranate trees disputed which was fairer, when the thistle exclaimed, "Brethren, let us not quarrel!"

A Reminiscence of 1783.

The first American flag that was ever displayed in Great Britain waved from the mast of the ship Bedford, Capt. Moore's, of Nantucket. She arrived at the Downs on Feb. 3, 1783, and reported at the custom-house on the 5th. A London journal of 1783 states that "she was not allowed regular entry until a consultation had taken place between the Commissioners of Customs and the Lords of Council, on account of the several acts of Parliament yet in force against the rebels in America. She is loaded with 487 huts of whale oil, is American built, manned wholly by American seamen, wears the rebel colors, and belongs to the island of Nantucket in Massachusetts. This is the first vessel to display the thirteen rebellions stripes in any British port. The vessel is at Horleydowns, a little below the Tower, and is intended immediately to return to New England."

An Offer Declined.

A letter from the Hon. Crabtree Lynch, of Buffalo, who styles himself: "The mastodon orator of the nineteenth century," contained an offer to appear before the club and deliver his lecture on: "Seven Ways of Being Happy," provided his expenses were paid and a $20 bill handed him as he left town. "We can't accept de offer," said the President in reply. "The price am not only too high, but we don't want nobody to tell us how to be happy. I don't know what his seven ways are, but when I gets down an evenin' wid a pan of mellow apples on one hand, a dish of peanuts on de other, wid my coon-cob pipe where I kin reach it an' dog asleep under the bed, I reckon I tackle bout all de happiness any one need fish fur in dis weary world. If I had six odder ways in reserve I should bust wid comfort."—Lime-Kilt Club.

A Costly Tomb.

Mr. John B. Bowman, of Cuttingsville, Vt., is mentioned as having built one of the most magnificent tombs in the country. It is erected in memory of his wife and daughter and cost nearly $75,000. It is in the shape of an Athenian temple, the outside being granite and the inside marble. At the entrance stands a life-size statue of Mr. Bowman, in the most advanced style of modern realism, with hat and gloves in one hand, and a wreath of immortelles in the other.

THE DAYS.

The tempest days go on, one and another, With gleam of sunshine, or with rift of gloom; With knots of daisies 'mong the tangled meshes, Of ivy, trailing where the mosses crowd.

The tempest days go on with merry faces, Framed in soft veils of wavy flaxen hair, With dancing feet that tread the happy places, With dimpled hands in attitude of prayer.

The tempest days go on. The wearied feet were happy bird-song, and with cooing dove; The clover patch all white with apple blossoms; The rose-strewn pathway, with its dream of love.

The tempest days go on. The wearied feet were at rest amid the cooling waters, While tramping o'er the dried leaves, and hearts wonder That Death should set his seal upon the flowers.

The tempest days go on; the embarks dying Upon the heavy stone, the severed home; The heart is pressed down, the mourners crying.

The little children orphaned and alone.

The tempest days go on. Spring, autumn, summer, Like waves along the shore they die away.

The tempest days go on, no one can number, That comes in the Resurrection Day.

STANLEY IN AFRICA.

How the Explorer Lives and Works and What He Hopes to Accomplish.

Under a recent date Edward King writes from Paris:

This morning I received a letter from Mr. Stanley, whose long silence, especially since his recent terrible illness, had much alarmed his friends and those who are backing him with their capital. Human life hangs by so slender a thread in the great wilds of Africa that whenever we, who have known and learned to admire and sympathize with the brave explorer, find among our letters one with his familiar, clerky handwriting on the envelope, we breathe a sigh of relief; for we are always afraid that some curt telegraphic announcement of his death may reach us. The mysterious continent is still full of terrors for the white man; fever and miasma do their fell work with startling swiftness. But it would appear from the present epistle that Mr. Stanley, by judicious and gentle conduct, has succeeded in doing away with one danger, which, for a long time, was the principal one. I mean the peril from attack by the tribes along the great river up which he is now steadily making his way, and on whose banks he is planting European civilization. I give you a few extracts from the letter, which I think will be of interest to all who appreciate the pluck and daring that have so long been Mr. Stanley's distinguishing characteristics.

The date is "General Camp of the Expedition on the Upper Congo, S. W. Africa, January 16, 1882." The explorer says:

" * * * You may guess from the tenor of the above that I am not ill nor depressed in spirits, nor languid, nor disposed to wish myself anywhere but where I am—in short, that I am at least in tolerable good health. It is not enough, and every few seconds I must perfume my dry dress. I drank water 75 degrees Fahrenheit but this is one of the inconveniences of Africa. Among others may be mentioned the monotony of the daily meals—a want of sufficient variety to satisfy an appetite which is good. There is one comfort attached to this—the meal is soon dispatched, and all thought of it ceases until the next usual hour. O! would that I could get one solid meal just now!

" I have been ill, though I suppose you may have heard of it. In fact, I have seen and tasted of death, and I now know what it means. I pity my comrades who have gone before me in a different fashion from what I used to do. This severe illness occurred during May, and I was nearly all June recovering from it. I was a palsied and miserable wretch when I informed my people that I should get well. For nineteen days fever held me to my bed. Seven days I was unable to eat anything; the rest of the time I had to be fed with a spoon. I could lie only in one position. Of course bed-sores attacked me, and most of the muscles of the back became as though they were palsied. On the nineteenth day I gave my final directions and my farewell, but before I finished I was muttering in delirium; and I next became nearly unconscious for two days. Then the fever left me a wreck. It was quick work, going down to utter feebleness; but to restore what fever had taken away required a long time. Once on the high road to recovery, however, strength, vigor and quickened life came rapidly, and in July I was on the road, surveying swiftly, for Stanley pool. Everybody knew that I was myself again. We have done wonders since, and we can look back with pleasure on the last six months, for the work we have done makes us smile calmly on our deathbeds.

An Elephant Hunt in Ceylon.

The presence here of the two sons of the Prince of Wales has been made the occasion for some festivity and Oriental display, and among the spectacles projected was an elephant hunt, called a kraal in Ceylon and a kaddah in India, and conducted as like a California cattle round-up as is possible with such large animals. The enclosure into which they are finally driven and secured is an actual corral, composed of palisades formed from the trunks of tall trees, from nine inches to a foot in diameter, and eighteen to twenty feet long, deeply embedded in the earth and strengthened by transverse beams and diagonal braces, strongly lashed to the uprights with natural ropes or tough jungle creepers. The last affair of this kind held in Ceylon was during the Duke of Edinburgh's visit, in 1870, and the one now described took place in nearly the same locality. Here, in a broad, thickly-wooded ravine, bisected by a stream of clear-running water, the kraal was located. It contained about four acres of thick jungle, through which paths were cut angularly to facilitate locomotion. The main entrance to this enclosure was at the lower end, and consisted of a broad aperture, capable of being securely closed at a moment's notice by enormous bars.

Branching off angularly from each side were long lines of barricades extending far into the outer jungle in the form of a funnel, and constituting what is known as the drive, into which the game is forced and from which it can not easily escape, being surrounded in the rear by huge bonfires; and a vast concourse of people called "beaters," with the usual accompaniment of charmers and soothsayers, fiercely attack the herd, and with loud cries, plaintive obtrusions, or fierce threats and other noisy demonstrations, urge the beasts forward toward the entrance of the inner kraal, into which they finally rush.

A day is then generally allowed them to endure starvation and somewhat quiet down, and in the meantime tame elephants are introduced, and men with axes prostrate most of the jungle in the vicinity of the stands that are erected for spectators on commanding sites, just

Boston's Whale.

There was an unusual excitement in East Boston, yesterday, over the rumor that the great Atlantic sea-serpent had not only made his customary appearance for the season, but that he had been cruelly slain, and that his remains were coiled up in Green's mammoth drydock on Border street. The rumor gave his dimensions anywhere from fifty to five hundred feet in length, and, before the business of the day had fairly commenced, the approaches to the dock were crowded with an anxious concourse of investigating humanity. As the day wore on, the crowd became so great that a detail of police was sent for to keep it in check, and, later, the approaches to the wharf were closed up altogether. Among the crushing multitude were several anxious proprietors of sea-side hotels and other resorts along the coast, who breathed a sigh of relief when they found that their pet advertising agent was still at large, and that the extraordinary curiosity which had been hauled into Green's dock was nothing but a monster whale. While the melancholy of the summer hotel men was dispelled, yet the curiosity of the crowds was not in the least weakened. The Leviathan of the deep is probably one of the finest and most perfect, as it is unquestionably the largest, of the whale species ever brought intact into an American port. It was found in charge of Capt. Hoe, an old practical whale fisherman, and author of an interesting book of these peculiar kings of the ocean. In the course of conversation he said that he had been upward of a year engaged in getting a satisfactory specimen for a company of Boston gentlemen who had employed him for the purpose. During this period he had captured nearly one hundred of one kind or another, but always, when he had succeeded in getting one that was satisfactory, it was devoured by sharks or dogfish before he could get it into port. The present "bird," as the Captain was pleased to denominate it, he described in most enthusiastic terms as the finest and largest that he had ever come across. Even in death the monster seemed frightful and dangerous as he lay extended on the bottom of the dock. The skin is of a yellowish or dark blue, lighter on the lower part of the body than elsewhere, and at a short distance had the appearance of a huge corrugated piece of pottery.

The whale was killed, said Capt. Hoe, early the present week, off Provincetown, and the capture of the monster was a very exciting and hazardous piece of work. He was shot with a "bomb lance," and, though evidently struck in a vital part at the first shot, yet he managed to lash and foam the briny deep in a most violent manner for several minutes before he gave up the ghost. He was not permitted to sink, as is usual when these monsters are shot, but was immediately hooked on to and towed into Provincetown harbor. Word of the capture was immediately telegraphed by Capt. Hoe to his employers in this city, and the steam tugboat William Woolley, which was dispatched to Provincetown on Tuesday, returned with its valuable charge in tow yesterday morning. The total expense of the captain's twelve months' fishing excursion has been about $5,000, but he considers this moderate when measured with the triumph he has finally achieved. He would not trade his "bird," he says, for a whole herd of Barnum's Jumbos. The huge mammal measures sixty-two feet in length, and its estimated weight is twenty-seven tons. Whalers, in estimating the weight of these monsters, allow a ton and a quarter to the linear foot. His Titanic head, with the curious growth of whalebone, and the huge tail, reminding one of the screws of a Canard steamer, are the most striking features of the great fish. His jaws have a spread of twenty-five feet, and, if his throat passage were proportionately large he could have swallowed a Pullman sleeping-car, passengers, colored porter and all, with very little difficulty. He measures eighteen feet across the flukes, and has a girth of fifty-eight feet. He belongs to the great northern rorqual species, which is said to be the largest of the whale tribe. Those who saw him yesterday were profuse in exclamations of wonder and admiration. Most of the whales of this rare and particular species found in Atlantic waters are insignificant in size, so Capt. Hoe says, and this specimen furthermore differs from most others in being a bull. He had evidently strayed from his course by being attracted by the small fish which abound along the eastern coast at this season of the year. The work of embalming the monster was commenced yesterday, and will be completed during the present week. What use is to be made of the specimen afterward, however, Capt. Hoe declines to reveal.—Boston Herald

Oiling the Waves.

The subject has at last been taken up in good earnest, and it is to a citizen of Peoria, Mr. John Shields, that is due the honor of taking the initiative in a movement which, if fully carried out, must prove of incalculable benefit to our seafaring population. Five years ago, as he stood beside a mill-pond on a windy day, he observed that the waters, which had been considerably ruffled, suddenly became smooth. On examination, he found that this arose from oil having been accidentally spilled from some machinery, and instantly forming such a film on the surface of the pond as to offer no resistance to the wind. Happily, it at once occurred to him that it might be possible to apply oil in such a systematic manner as to calm the entrance to a harbor in stormy weather. The idea having once suggested itself, he never rested till he had thought it out and devised means of executing it. The plan he hit upon was that of laying iron and lead pipes from the beach right across the harbor to the open sea, terminating in the deep water 200 feet beyond the bar, and then, by means of a force-pump on the shore, to pump oil into the tubes and eject it at the bottom of the sea outside the harbor, so that as it rose to the surface it might be driven inward and prevent the formation of breakers on the bar. The pipes are fitted with three conical valves fixed seventy-five feet apart at the sea end of the pipe. These are forced open by the stream of oil as it flows out and instantly close when the pressure is removed. Mr. Shields fixed upon Peterhead, in Aberdeenshire (the easternmost headland of Scotland, and consequently a spot exposed to the full force of every gale that sweeps the east coast) as the most suitable spot for his test experiments. Here, then, he proceeded to submerge 1,200 feet of lead and iron piping. A large barrel containing about a hundred gallons of oil was placed in a shed on the beach in connection with the force-pump.

Toward the end of February last some preliminary experiments were tried on a small scale, but the amount of oil expended was very trifling, and the effect was disappointing. One of the fishers standing by remarked that he could not understand it, as his own life had once been saved by hanging pieces of whale's blubber overboard, and he was certain that the same means systematically applied must produce the desired effect.

On the 1st of March we may say that the apparatus was fully and practically tested for the first time, and with such success as to leave no doubt that it must shortly be a recognized necessity in all harbors dangerous of access. On the day in question a gale was blowing from the southeast, accompanied by a heavy sea. Huge green billows, from ten to twenty feet in height, curled in white crests as they neared the harbor mouth, and broke in mad surf above the bar. No boat could have dared to face those breakers, and any luckless vessel wrecked on that rock-bound, inhospitable coast must have been abandoned to her fate. No better day could have been selected to test the soothing power of oil. If any perceptible difference could be produced on those raging, tumultuous waters, it was evident that the gaining of a complete victory over them became merely a question of how much oil was to be expended. In the present instance the big 100-gallon cask was filled. The forcing pump was set in action, and a large quantity of oil was driven through the pipes, whence it was ejected at the bottom of the sea, at some distance beyond the impassable barrier of mighty breakers. The oil immediately rose to the surface and formed a thin film on the water extending right across the harbor mouth.

Straightway the dangerous white crests disappeared, and, though the strong tide still swept inward, in huge swelling billows, they were shorn of their terror, and became perfectly smooth rollers on which any vessel or boat might safely have ridden into dock. Owing to the strength of the tide and the severity of the gale the oil was swept shoreward so rapidly as to render continuous pumping necessary. But as long as the oil supply was kept up the surf was kept down, and there remained no reasonable doubt in the minds of the spectators that henceforth the raging of the waters could be subdued at will, and that ships might be enabled to make the port in safety, no matter how wild the tempest.

C. F. Gordon Cummings, in Nineteenth Century.

The Cherokee Rose.

The legend of the Cherokee rose is as pretty as the flower itself. An Indian chief of the Seminole tribe was taken prisoner by his enemies, the Cherokees, and doomed to torture, but became so seriously ill that it became necessary to wait for his restoration to health before committing him to the fire. And as he lay prostrated by disease in the cabin of the Cherokee warrior, the daughter of the latter, a young, dark-faced maid, was his nurse. She fell in love with the young chieftain, and, wishing to save his life, urged him to escape, but he would not do so unless she would flee with him. She consented. Yet before she had gone far, impelled by soft regret of leaving home, she asked permission of her lover to return home for the purpose of bearing away some memento of it. So, retracing her footsteps, she broke a twig from the white rose which climbed up the poles of her father's tent, and preserved it during her flight through the wilderness and planted it by the door of her new home in the land of the Seminoles. And from that day this beautiful flower has always been known between the capes of Florida and throughout the Southern States by the name of Cherokee rose.

A day is then generally allowed them to endure starvation and somewhat quiet down, and in the meantime tame elephants are introduced, and men with axes prostrate most of the jungle in the vicinity of the stands that are erected for spectators on commanding sites, just

Female Smokers.

Many women fancy that woman suffrage is going to abolish man's political and moral vices by force of election and legislation. All this work of the imagination is of the same sort as the fancy that the freed woman's chief object will be to please man. A robust minded view is that emancipation is to free woman from all the restraints which servitude has kept upon her conduct, and that she will enjoy her freedom in the way that man does. And when emancipation shall have brought equality, it is analogical to conclude that when Darwin has pointed out in that lower stage of development in which the French savant finds equality of the sexes will be restored in the high stage, and that the male will be that sex in which the desire to be agreeable to the opposite sex shall be the chief motive.

A false assumption is that woman will not be attractive to man if she smokes. Why not, if the man smokes? If they enjoy it, as they pretend, why deny the enjoyment to women? That which they keep in their own mouths they cannot call unclean in others. He whose mouth is odorous with tobacco can have no sensitiveness as to the same odor in other mouths. Kissing is an exchange of endearments peculiar to human kind. It is current coin of the newly married. If the man's lips are reeking with tobacco, shall not the kiss have stronger zest if the woman's lips exhale the same flavor? Does he not need this strong flavor to reach his own highly flavored sensibility?

If tobacco tanned lips be repulsive, the wife needs to tan hers in the same way in self-defense. The married state is a leveler. One of the twain, who are now one flesh, can not continue delicate if the other is coarse. In many ways they become, in fact, as in the marriage theory. The wife of a smoking man can have no reason of cleanliness or delicacy towards him to keep her from smoking. He who smokes or chews can have no delicacy to be revolted by a smoking or chewing woman.

This distinction is not seen in the lower civilization is a badge of woman's inferior state. She means not to rest until she has overthrown all marks of her slavery. Smoking is a social indulgence; why forbid it to her who makes social happiness? Women have to take the most of all that is unwholesome in the use of tobacco by men; why not compensate them by sharing whatever there is of enjoyment? Beside the propensity of woman, from a very early period of her existence, has been to desire whatever was forbidden. Smoking looks like enjoyment. This is the chief propagator. This temptation is continually before women.

But the question will be decided by women, according to her own sweet will. It will enter into the claim of equal rights, and when thus the abstaining comes to be associated with denial of rights, she will smoke to assert her equality. When women have punctured the dam of a great flood by claiming rights. When the question takes the shape of the right to smoke, there is no question. When women shall be really emancipated, she will act upon this matter according to her own will, freed from those rules of conduct which are the chains of her slavery, and relieved from any necessity to consider whether it will make her less agreeable to the man.

Smoking has a convenience which woman needs as much as man. It is a habit of stimulation which is exempt from the reproach of intemperance. A cigar is a stronger intoxicant than a dram, but he who takes daily drams is called a toper. One may keep his brain fuddled all the while with tobacco; may be so subject to it that if he misses his cigar, pipe or cud, he runs down, as the toper when he misses his stated dram, and yet, not a subject for the temperance crusaders; may himself be a crusader. Here is a way in which women may get a share of that incessant stimulation which seems a necessity to men. With unlimited cigars, and those positive nerve stimulants, tea, and coffee, they will have not a bad chance. The rest will come with the expansion of their minds by freedom. —Cincinnati Gazette.

ONCE upon a time a woman died; and as the mourners were carrying her to the grave they tripped against a stump and let the coffin fall. She revived, having been only in a deep trance. Two years after she really died, and as they were carrying her down the same road and neared the same stump the disconsolate widow sobbed, "Steady, boys; steady there. Be very careful!" —Quiz.

In FRENCH cities extravagance runs riot in dress. Economical and thrifty in other respects, the Frenchwoman will always disburse freely, according to her degree, for purposes of personal adornment.

Women Never Think!

If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered the sentiment could but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would note their sagacity and wisdom in selecting Hop Bitters as the best, and demonstrating by keeping their familes in perpetual health, at a mere nominal expense, he would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.

Creatures of Circumstance.

"I suppose you had always a great fancy for surgery?" people often used to say to Sir Benjamin Brodie, the great English surgeon of the day. The truth was that he had no more taste for it than a top for a pole-cat. He went into the business because there was nothing else for him to do. It is not at all probable that the elder Bennett ever had any youthful aspirations in the direction of journalism, or that A. T. Stewart ever thought of becoming a merchant. Stephenson was not an inventor, because he willed to be one; nor Edison an electrician because that was the dream of his boyhood. These men followed the bent of their own genius, and for them it was along the line of least resistance.

Cure for Snake Bites.

An old mountaineer in Virginia gives his cure for rattlesnake bites as follows: "Just pull the mouth of a bottle filled with turpentine on the wound and the pizen will drop out and make the turpentine green. Some, however, kill the snake and bind a piece of it on the bite. That drops the pizen out." This explains what male picknickers carry in bottles when they start for the shaded groves.

"How do You MANAGE," said a lady to her friend, "to appear so happy all the time?" "I always have Parker's Ginger Tonic brandy," was the reply, "and keeps myself and family in good health. When I am well I always feel good natured." See other column.

Fears of Death.

Why should men ever be afraid to die but that they regard the spirit as secondary to that which is but its mere appendage and convenience, its symbol, its word, its means of visibility? If the soul lose this poor mansion of hers by the sudden conflagration of disease, or by the slow decay of age, is she therefore houseless and shelterless? If she cast away this soiled and battered garment, is she therefore naked? A child looks forward to a new suit and dons it joyfully; we cling to our rags and foulness. We should welcome death as one who brings us tidings of the finding of long-lost titles to a large family estate, and set out gladly to take possession, though, it may be, not without a natural fear for the humbler home we are leaving. Death always means us a kindness, though he has often a gruff way of offering it. —James Russell Lowell.

The French Republic.

France is the most prosperous country of Europe. Its agricultural industries are large and the people are industrious and economical. The debt is owned at home and the people don't want it paid, because they believe more firmly in their own Government than in outside powers. The French republic will be permanent. The death of the Prince Imperial was a great blow to the Bonapartist faction, but the three monarchial parties together are not formidable against the republic. The Republican party can hardly be defeated unless by serious divisions among the leaders, which are not to be feared. The days of coup d'états in France are past. There have been no serious disturbances of late years. The Government is strong and conservative. —Ex-Minister Noyes.

NOT AN EXCEPTIONAL CASE.

Jenkins came to New York from a suburban city, and, going to a first-rate restaurant, had a broiled porterhouse beefsteak which was cooked by a well-paid man who had a fine fire. He paid 75 cents for it, and went away satisfied and happy, saying that after all it is nonsense for a woman to think that she cannot cook a beefsteak in the right style. Then he got out of the train at his station that evening he thought he would have another fine, tender, juicy and rich beefsteak, and, as he was used to doing the marketing, he went into the butcher store, bought that thin piece of beef from the round for 20 cents, went home to find his wife at the wash tub, and, throwing the round steaks on the table, said: "I want you to cook that in the New York style, or else it is time for me to starve to death." —New York Herald.

Largest Land-Owner on the Continent.

Col. Dan Murphy, of Halleck's Station, Elko county, came to California in 1844, and may be said to have made the country pay him well for his time. He is now probably the largest private land-owner on this continent. He has 4,000,000 acres of land in one body in Mexico, 60,000 in Nevada, and 23,000 in California. His Mexican grant he bought four years ago for $200,000, or 5 cents an acre. It is sixty miles long, and covers a beautiful country of hill and valley, pine timber and meadow land. It comes within twelve miles of the city of Durango, which is to be a station on the Mexican Central. Mr. Murphy raises wheat on his California land, and cattle on that in Nevada. He got 55,000 sacks last year, and ships 6,000 head of cattle a year right along. —Rome (Nev.) Gazette.

RUINED BY A SPIDER.

Spiders crawling more abundantly and conspicuously than usual upon the indoor walls of our houses indicate the near approach of rain; but the following anecdote intimates that some of their habits are equally certain indication of frost being at hand. Quartermaster Disjoun, seeking to beguile the tedium of his prison hours at Utrecht, had studied attentively the habits of the spider, and eight years of imprisonment had given him leisure to be well versed in its ways. In December, 1794, the French army, on whose success his liberty depended, was in Holland, and the victory seemed certain if the frost, then of unprecedented severity, continued. The Dutch envoy had failed to negotiate a peace, and Holland was despairing, when the frost suddenly broke. The Dutch were now exulting and the French Generals prepared to retreat, but the spider warned Disjoun that the thaw would be of short duration, and he knew that his weather monitor never deceived. He contrived to communicate with the army of his countrymen and its Generals, who duly estimated his character, and relied upon his assurance that within a few days the water would again be passable by troops. They delayed their retreat. Within twelve days frost had returned. The French army triumphed. Disjoun was liberated; and a spider had brought down ruin on the Dutch nation.

HORSES AND LUCK.

The belief in witchcraft, which in years gone by was so extensively entertained, has not yet died out, and in many of our country villages it is regarded as one of those secret dangers to which every human is more or less exposed. Hence we find various devices still resorted to for the purpose of counteracting the supposed hurtful influences of this baneful power, instances of which we submit. Thus, according to a common idea, one of the best preservatives is a horseshoe nailed to the threshold. The reason of this is said to be that Mars, the god of war, and the war-horse, was thought to be an enemy of Saturn, who, according to the medieval idea, was the liege lord of witches. Thus, iron instruments of any kind have been said to keep witches at bay—a superstition which has been traced back to the Romans, who drove nails into the walls of their houses as an antidote against the plague. Mr. Napier says that he has seen the horseshoe in large beer-shops in London, and was present at the trial of one of these when an animated discussion arose as to whether it was most effective to have the shoe nailed behind the door or upon the first step of the door. Both positions had their advocates, and instances of extraordinary luck were recounted as having attended them. —Dyer's Domestic Folio.

A POPULAR TONIC

FOR WEAK LUNGS and Consumption. No preparation ever introduced to the American public for the relief and cure of Conghs, Colds, Sore Throat, Debilitated Constitutions, Weakness of the Lungs, or Consumption in the incipient and advanced stages of the disease, has ever won the endorsement of physician or patients as the celebrated "Tolu, Rock and Rye." The repeated and continued sales of the article everywhere attest the evidence of its real merit. Letters and telegrams from every quarter of the country, attesting the stimulating, tonic and healing effects, are in possession of the proprietors, and can be adduced to convince the reader of the remarkable and unique virtues. Further commendation is unnecessary and superfluous, as a trial of this article, having a pleasant taste and agreeable flavor, will satisfy all those who are afflited with a weak lung, by the use of Tolu, Rock and Rye. Chicago Times.

Right Em. Gr. Com. Collins informs us that a special train will run from Janesville to Fond du Lac next Tuesday, upon the occasion of the laying under Masonic auspices, of the corner stone of the new court house in the latter city, and gives us the further information that if any fair number of the Masons of this city desire to attend the ceremonies it is probable arrangements could be made to have the special train run down here. The fare for the round trip from Janesville will be $3.40. —Beloit Free Press.

DECORATION NOTICE.

Citizens of Janesville:—A most cordial invitation is extended to all who love the dear old flag, to render assistance at the Court Street Sunday School rooms on Tuesday, May 30th, at nine o'clock a.m. Members of the Sunday schools are earnestly invited to gather wild flowers, arrange them in bouquets, and bring the rooms before nine o'clock.

Will the priests in charge of our Catholic churches please ask their people to bring flowers and assist us in this good work?

Come then, all who cherish the memory of our dead heroes, who gave their lives for the preservation of our national honor, for what more appropriate tribute can we pay to those who have joined the army triumphant than by reverently strewing God's bright messengers over the lowly mounds where they quietly sleep?

Those who have dear ones at rest in our cemeteries and who wish to arrange special floral tributes are requested to bring them to the rooms as early as 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. Please see that these are given in special charge to one of the ladies on the committee which committee consists of the chairwoman from each church.

An order was entered appointing George A. Houston, of Beloit, and Edward Ruger, of this city, as such commissioners.

Mrs. MARY D. McHENRY, Chairman Decoration Committee.

GOSPEL TRUTH.

He that is surety for a stranger, shall smart for it. But he that trusteth in SPRING BLOSSOM for curing liver, kidney, and complaints of a like tendency, shall never be disappointed. Price 50 cents, trial bottles, 10 cents.

Mrs. HUNTER Pleasantly Rememb'red.

The lady students of the Lawrence University gave Mrs. Dr. E. D. Hunterley a genuine and gracious surprise last week, the particulars of which Mrs. Hunterley's many friends in Janesville will be glad to read. It is known that during the past winter she suffered severely from an attack of sickness, and when she became able to return to Appleton, fifty young ladies, all students in the University, chartered a car on the Wisconsin Central railway and went to Menasha to meet her. The rest of the story we give in the language of the Appleton Post:

"Finding she had come by the Northwestern, they had the car switched to the track of that road. The surprise was complete, and was as gratifying as it was delightful and pleasant. The sincere wishes of the young ladies for her health, as they each in turn shook hands and embraced Mrs. Hunterley, spoke volumes that can only be realized by one so much beloved as Mrs. H. by the lady students of the university. There is nothing so beautiful in this life as that sweet and unbridled friendship and affection which comes spontaneous from the heart, when dear friends meet. Nothing so chears, awakes and quickens the holy bonds of human kindness and love, elevates and purifies our lives, makes us realize the wealth there is in the human heart, than the unbroken attachment that some of us create for others in our daily life. The sunshine of earth and the golden reward hereafter are all strengthened by such bonds of sympathy and kindness."

"Most gladly indeed do we welcome Mrs. Hunterley back to our midst, with the hope that she may soon be restored to permanent health."

A free invitation is extended to the decorating committees and their aids, upon their return from the cemetery tomorrow, to eat ice cream and cake at my ice cream rooms, East Milwaukee street, opposite Myers house.
